The Johnson County Development Corporation (JCDC) is a non-profit public/private partnership supported by investors and governed by a board of directors. JCDC is responsible for growing the industrial base by fostering quality job creation and tax base development, and for retaining existing business and industry in Johnson County. By doing these things we increase the overall quality of life for residents throughout the community.

The JCDC is a resource broker. We work with clients who are considering Johnson County as a possible location for their business. By providing site and building, workforce, demographic, cost of doing business, and quality of life information, we can help our clients truly understand the climate in our county—thus making their location decision-making process a smooth one. Additionally, we work with our local and state governing bodies to help negotiate the necessary incentives required to attract new companies to Johnson County, as well as to help existing companies continue to grow.
